Subject: Sale of Mason Electric's Carter Communications Product Line to Extant Components Group

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing in follow-up to the referenced [telecom / email] regarding the recent sale of the Carter communications line of products by Mason Electric Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Esterline Technologies Corporation, to Extant Components Group and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Symetrics Industries.

On 26 July 2013, Mason Electric Company and Extant completed an Asset Purchase Agreement for the sale of the Carter communications products, and all related tooling, inventories, spares, and intellectual property rights have been transitioned to Extant Components Group and Symetrics Industries.

Effective 26 July 2013, all new product manufacturing and related product sales, service, and technical support for the Carter products will be provided by Symetrics Industries. Customers seeking to purchase, or in need of information or support for any of the listed products should contact Symetrics directly using the information listed below.

Symetrics Industries was founded in 1962 and is headquartered in Melbourne FL. Symetrics manufactures and repairs complex electronics and avionics assemblies for military, commercial, and business and general aviation operators through OEM license, acquisition, or sustaining obsolescence redesign initiatives. The company's product portfolio features a range of communication, control, sensing, imagery, and display systems and LRUs.

Symetrics is certified under AS 9100 Revision C and ISO 9000. The facilities are ITAR registered and compliant. Symetrics is also approved under 14 CFR Part 21, Part 145 and EASA Part 145.
